

11th International Colloquium on Ancient Greek Linguistics

June 25–27, 2025, Université Côte d'Azur, Nice (France)

The 11th International Colloquium on Ancient Greek Linguistics (ICAGL) (4th in the new series) will be held in Nice in June of 2025. The original series started in Amsterdam 1986 and in 2015 merged with the Italian series of conferences on Greek linguistics (Incontro Internazionale di Linguistica Greca), to start the new regular series of colloquia held every three years. The previous meetings of the ICAGL took place at the Università Tor Vergata in Rome (2015), at the University of Helsinki (2018) and at the Universidad Autónoma de Madrid (2022). This series of conferences aims to provide an international forum to present high-calibre ongoing research, or results already achieved, by scholars in the field of Ancient Greek linguistics.

We invite any interested linguist working on Ancient Greek to present their work at the ICAGL conference in Nice, either as papers or posters. We will accept proposals related to any aspect of Ancient Greek linguistics, including phonetics, phonology, morphology, syntax, semantics, pragmatics, and discourse. The orientation of the papers can be diachronic and/or synchronic.

The conference will start on Wednesday morning June 25th and will finish on Friday June 27th, 2025. An official dinner will take place on Thursday June 24th.

Those interested should submit their abstracts before November 1st, 2024, using the online form at <https://icagl2025.sciencesconf.org/submission/submit>. The outcome will be communicated no later than February 15th, 2025.

The abstract for papers and posters should be entirely anonymous and contain the following elements:

1. Indication whether the author(s) intend to present a paper or a poster.
2. The aim of the paper, the methodology employed in the investigation and the main results the author expects or has obtained. This portion of the abstract must be no more than 800 words in length (excluding references).
3. Bibliographical references (excluding all references by the author(s) of the paper or poster).
4. A choice of maximum 3 keywords.

One person may submit at most one abstract as sole author and one abstract as co-author (or two co-authored abstracts).

Each presentation will last 20 minutes, followed by 5 minutes of discussion. The working languages of the colloquium are English, French, German, Greek, Italian, and Spanish.

Keynote speakers:

Claire LE FEUVRE, Sorbonne Université
Silvia LURAGHI, Università di Pavia
Jeremy RAU, Harvard University

Organizing committee:

Nicolas BERTRAND (Université Côte d'Azur, BCL, CNRS)
nicolas.bertrand@univ-cotedazur.fr
Richard FAURE (Université de Tours, CeThis)
richard.faure@univ-tours.fr

Information on registration, venue and other practical matters will be announced soon on the Colloquium website (<https://icagl2025.sciencesconf.org>), which will be up-dated regularly.